

AMERICANS AT CORONATION

Whitelaw Reid and John Hays Hammond Head List.

HONOR FOR CHARLES P. TAFT

President's Brother and Wife Given Seats in Westminster Abbey by Order of King—American Wives of Noblemen.

London, June 23.—American representation at the coronation pageant included the American ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, accompanied by Mrs. Reid, and the American special ambassador, John Hays Hammond, with his wife and daughter.

Mr. Reid was attended by the officials of the American embassy, including the secretary of the embassy, William Phillips; the naval attaché, Commander Simpson; and Mrs. Simpson, and the military attaché, Major Slocum and Mrs. Slocum. Mr. Hammond had as his military aid General Greely, and as his naval aid Admiral Vreeland.

Although hundreds of prominent Americans attempted to secure admission to the abbey, the greater number were unsuccessful. President Taft's brother, Charles P. Taft, and the latter's wife, were among the few not holding official position who were granted seats in the abbey. This was done by command of King George, on the suggestion of the British ambassador to Washington, James Bryce.

When J. Pierpont Morgan entered the abbey many whispered his name and watched him with interest as he shook hands with several women in the diplomatic circle before going to his seat. He was accorded an enthusiastic reception, as were Mr. and Mrs. Taft and Miss Taft.

The Americans occupied prominent places in the second row of the diplomatic gallery. Mr. Morgan wore a court uniform of black velvet, knee breeches, silver buttons and a sword. Mr. Taft had a similar costume, except that he wore a white vest. The costumes of the ladies were elegant.

American wives of English members of the nobility figured prominently in the exercises of the day. Among these were three duchesses—the duchess of Roxburgh, the duchess of Manchester and the duchess of Marlborough, former Miss Goelet of Newport, Miss Zimmerman of Cincinnati and Miss Vanderbilt of New York.

Others were the marchioness of Dufferin, formerly Miss Davis of New York; the countess of Essex, formerly Miss Grant of New York; the countess of Suffolk, formerly Miss Leiter of Washington; the countess of Granard, formerly Miss Mills of New York; the countess of Donoughmore, formerly Miss Grace of New York, and the countess of Tankerville, formerly Miss Van Manton of New York.

Other American wives of British peers were the Viscountess Falkland, Lady Chylesmore, Lady Newborough, Lady Monson, Lady Leith, Lady Ashburton and Lady Bateman.

CAPT. WALLACE IS HONORED BY CALHOUN COUNTY COMRADES

The Coleman Post and a detachment of the Sons of Veterans of Calhoun county were entertained Thursday at the home of Capt. J. N. Wallace, of the 9th Michigan. After dinner they gathered on the lawn in front of the house and sang their old war songs and gave old time yells intermingling them with many old reminiscences dear to the hearts of the old soldiers. At the close of their program they presented Capt. Wallace with a large beautiful silk flag and Mrs. Wallace with a dozen spoons and a handsome meat fork.

Quiet Wedding

At Shaw Home

MISS LENA SHAW UNITED IN MARRIAGE WITH HOLLAND MAN.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Shaw of 42 Summit street, Thursday evening when their daughter, Lena, was united in marriage with Joseph Borgman of Holland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Arthur Beach, pastor of the Congregational church, at 8 o'clock, in the presence of only the family and the immediate friends. Everything was very informal, the bride and groom mingling with and receiving their guests. The couple were unattended and the bride wore her traveling gown. The house decorations were of pink and white. A wedding supper was served in the dining room after congratulations had been extended. Mr. and Mrs. Borgman left on an evening train for a lake trip after which they will be at home at Holland where Mr. Borgman has a position with the telephone company.

Miss Shaw is a graduate of the Ypsilanti high school, the State Normal College and has taught at Holland, Boone, Iowa, and at Aspen, Col., since her graduation.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Freeman and children of Chelsea, and Mrs. Bert Comstock of Deerfield.

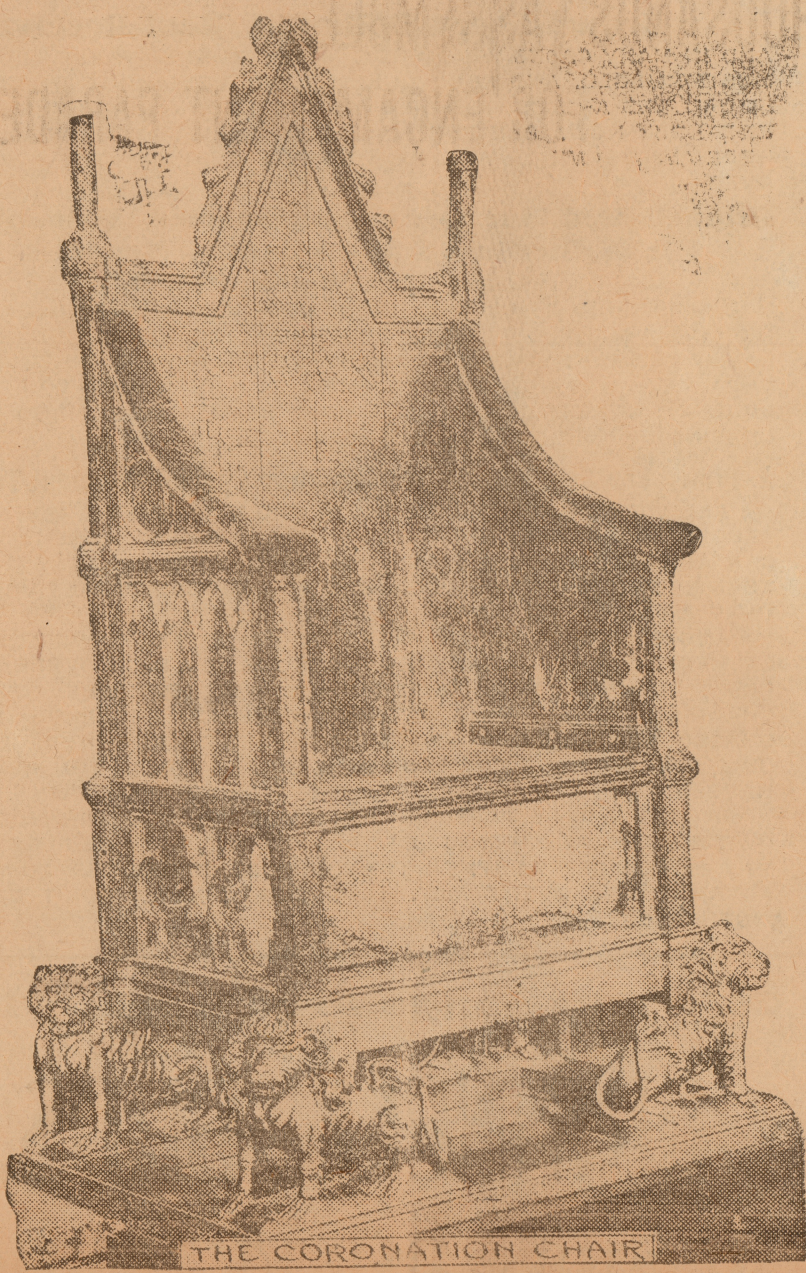

SAYS HER TONGUE WAGS

LIKE WAVES OF THE OCEAN—CAN'T STAND IT

Ann Arbor, June 23.—Dan W. Beverley has filed a bill asking for a divorce from his wife, Victoria A. Beverley, on the grounds of extreme cruelty. He claims she has an ungovernable temper and a tongue that wags back and forth like the waves of the ocean, and has such a mean and cruel manner that mortal man cannot stand it to live with her.

GORE IN SARCASTIC SPEECH

Thanks Finance Committee for Complimentary Promptness—Senate Discusses Canadian Reciprocity Bill.

Washington, June 23.—The senate finance committee reported adversely on the farmers' free list bill and the Underwood wool bill, which had come over from the house.

The action was taken as the result of the passage by the senate twenty-four hours earlier of the Gore resolution directing a report to the senate not later than July 10. The bills went upon the calendar and will come up later.

Senator Gore, author of the resolution which brought the two bills out of committee, made a brief speech, full of sarcasm, in which he thanked the finance committee for their prompt response to the resolution.

Senator Culberson of Texas introduced a resolution directing the committee on privileges and elections to investigate and report to the senate the amount of money that was contributed by persons, corporations or firms to each of the political campaign committees in 1904 and 1908.

The senate took up and discussed the Canadian reciprocity bill. Senator Nelson defended schedule K. Senator Nelson spoke in opposition to Canadian reciprocity and Senator Cummins stated his reasons for opposing the Root amendment.

WRECK CAUSES ECONOMY

Burlington Road Calls on Each Employee to Make a Little Saving.

Omaha, Neb., June 23.—As the result of the recent wreck at Indianola, Neb., in which the loss was $250,000 every employee of the Burlington railroad has been asked to perform some sort of economy which he would not otherwise do. The request comes direct from President Miller and was sent out through the different departments to every man and woman in the employ of the system. Additionally the order came from President Miller to cut all expenses to the minimum.

The wreck which brought about the order happened several weeks ago. Eighteen people were killed, eighty injured, and the two whole trains, including locomotives, demolished.

WIFE DEAF MUTE, TOO

Kalamazoo Deserter Is Arrested in Wabash, Ind.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 23.—Fred McCarthy, who a few days ago deserted his deaf mute wife and two babies in this city, was arrested in Wabash, Ind., and will be brought back to this city at once.

McCarthy's act created intense indignation here. While his wife and babies were away one afternoon he moved all the furniture out of the home and sold it, then disappeared. Mrs. McCarthy and her children have been taken to the poorhouse.

Members Of The 14th Are Well Entertained

MRS. MERENESS AND OTHER W.

R. C. WOMEN SERVE LUNCHEON TO 16 VETERANS.

The W. R. C. of Ypsilanti, who are ever ready to work for and entertain members of the G. A. R., assisted Mrs. Seth B. Mereness in entertaining a remnant of the 14th Infantry at her home, 601 Pearl street. Sixteen old soldiers of the regiment were here attending the state encampment. Luncheon was served, and the band of the 26th Infantry furnished music.

W. H. Talcott, an attorney of South Lyon, being present, responded to the toast, "Our honored guests." He said, "Soldiers and Honored Guests of the 14th Infantry: We are glad to welcome you back today to our city. You doubtless remember that the day before your regiment was to leave for the seat of war, a poem was written and set to music. I will quote the first stanza, except the chorus: 'Ypsilanti is the place where we have gathered strong. Woman's hands and loving hearts have cheered us all along. Rich will be the blessing that for us you'll weave when we return from the war.'"

"The next day our regiment left for the seat of war, and no regiment of Michigan sent braver men than the 14th Infantry, which lost several hundred men in more than a dozen hard fought battles. Your regiment made records that will live in history till time's latest day. Fifty years ago there was another flag seeking recognition from the nations of the world. That flag was not an emblem of liberty, but it was an emblem of slavery and bondage. Thanks to your bravery and valor, the stars on that flag set to rise no more."

The W. R. C. feel deeply indebted to Frank Norton, the florist, for the quantities of flowers he has sent them during the convention. He furnished all those which were used in the decoration of the church where their meetings were held. Then on Thursday, the day of the parade, he sent fully a bushel of flowers in addition for the flower girls to carry in the procession. Not only did he contribute them, but he delivered them himself, and he has the keenest gratitude of all the ladies for this splendid help he gave.

SAFE BROKEN FOR $5.80 LOCAL MEN SUSPECTED

The Arnold Ward creamery was broken into Thursday night and $5.80 taken. It is the habit of the creamery company never to keep large sums of money in the safe. The door was not securely fastened but the inner drawer where the money was placed was carefully locked. This lock was forced and the contents taken. From all appearances the burglary was by local talent.

DE LA BARRA IS NOT SATISFIED

Refuses to Enter Madero Cabinet or Run for President.

WILL WITHDRAW AT TERM'S END

Opera House Efforts to Re-Establish Order in Several States Are Source of Much Amusement—One Governor Ejects Legislature.

Mexico City, June 23.—According to well authenticated rumors which have been in circulation within the past few days President De La Barra will not assist the Madero government after his present term expires.

At all events it is known that he has refused the place in the cabinet offered by Francisco I. Madero during the conference between the latter, De La Barra and General Reyes some weeks ago, when it was stated that the foreign relations portfolio had been offered to the president and the ministry of war to Reyes. The explanation of De La Barra's action is said to be that he is dissatisfied with several obligations which Madero undertook with the United States interests before and during the revolution. The president thinks it is either impolitic or impossible to fulfill these obligations and refuses to have anything to do with the business.

In a public interview President De La Barra also refused to be considered as a candidate for the presidency.

The efforts made in several states to re-establish order have degenerated into comedy. Besides Guanajuato, where four governors were appointed and deposed in seven days, Zacatecas, Jalisco and other states are in difficulties. In Zacatecas several groups of revolutionists refuse to recognize the governor who was appointed by Madero, while more than twenty candidates have offered themselves at the coming elections. In Jalisco the newly appointed governor celebrated his entrance into power by ejecting the legislature completely and declaring that all the members had been elected and therefore had no right to retain office. He closed and sealed the doors of the legislative halls. The legislature refused to be fired and the members have appealed to the national government. For the present the members are holding their meetings in private houses and declare they will elect another governor.

Three regiments were ordered to prepare to hurry to Cuernavaca, but have not left. General Zapata returned to Cuernavaca after an interview with Madero in Mexico City. He promised to disband his entire following immediately and to visit Tepuacan for his health. There is apprehension in the city over reports that he played Madero false.

THOUSANDS ASSEMBLE FOR ENCAMPMENT PARADE

The admirable parade which featured the encampment on Thursday afternoon was carried out entirely as planned and was an immense success. Thousands of people, in the streets and on the sidewalks, from the vantage ground of drays and carriages and automobiles, from windows and convenient balconies and trees, viewed the splendid spectacle with the greatest enthusiasm. A half hour was consumed in the passing. It was on Michigan street the procession was formed, so that by the time they swung into Huron street, they were in perfect form.

The line went down Huron street, turned east on Cross and counter-marched at the depot, and, coming back on Cross, went south on Adams till the reviewing stand on Congress street was reached.

A squad of mounted police came first and were closely followed by the Signal Corps mounted and riding particularly well. In their khaki suits, with fine erect figures, they were a very interesting feature of the parade.

The department commander and his able staff rode next, followed by a file and drum corps.

A field telegraph reel cart drawn by two fine bays just preceded the Spanish War men, who were dressed in khaki suits and carried army guns. Long, impressive lines of G. A. R. on foot extending two or three blocks, were the most affecting part of the parade. The veterans bravely trudged along—many, it is true, walking with still fine vigor in their brave,

AUTO IS HIT BY

CAR; OCCUPANTS LUCKILY ESCAPE

Thursday evening as Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Roach were taking a number of visiting W. R. C. ladies riding, they met with an accident at the corner of the Catholic church on Cross street. Mr. Roach was coming along on Hamilton street and did not see the trolley car in time. In attempting to slow down he only succeeded in stopping his car directly on the tracks. The trolley car struck the machine and one back wheel is smashed up as a consequence. One of the ladies, Mrs. Hamlin, who is a guest of Mrs. Boutell, fainted and the Boy Scouts were sent for. In less than two minutes they made the run, great credit for which speedy run is due Mr. Hand. Dr. Murray was the physician on duty at that time and went along with the boys. First aid was administered and the patient was taken to Mrs. Boutell's home.

ENTHUSIASM RUNS HIGH AT CAMP FIRES

The campfire of Thursday evening at the M. E. church equalled, if not exceeded, that of Wednesday evening. Hon. H. C. Rankin presided in his genial fashion.

The first speaker was Governor Chase S. Osborn, whose subject was "Michigan's War Governor, Austin Blair." The life and deeds of this fine old war governor the speaker had evidently studied deeply, with the end of being keenly impressed with his strong and noble points. He was the peer of the notable group of governors to which Gov. Buckingham belonged. When Austin Blair became governor on January 1, 1861, he faced many problems, but all, financial and military, he settled in a masterly way. After his period of being governor was over, Mr. Blair served the people in other capacities, such as regent in the University, and in Congress. His service to his country lasted nearly until his last hour. He died in 1894 and as late as 1890 was in office.

Governor Osborn spoke frequently and very appreciatively of the service to their country which the veterans before him had rendered. He said he would make his speech brief because of the excessive heat of the evening, "but it isn't as hot as it was at Antietam, is it?" Bursts of applause. "Ora at Shiloh!" More applause.

Mr. Rankin then introduced John A. Gilman, National Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R. His talk, filled with visions of the scenes in the homes when husbands, fathers and sons left the women there to go and fight, the apprehensions of these women and the heroism of the men, touched the popular chord. He said that the sweethearts also must be mentioned. "All the boys that went to the war had sweethearts, for they were all that kind of boys. They loved humanly to be sure, but also they loved some dear girl. I believe the government owed many thousands of soldiers to the dear girls." The girls liked the uniform and when Marie saw Jane's fellow with a uniform on, she was very likely to treat her John with suggestive coldness until he donned one too, and after he had done it for the sake of the girl, he kept it

A TEXT FOR ALL TIME.

The receding rumble of war found standing amidst the sombre sacrificial surroundings of gloomy yet glorious Gettysburg, Abraham Lincoln, his hallowed head bared in deference to the devoted dead, he handed us a text for all time:

"It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

This is a living text to vitalize a living, progressive patriotism. It contemplates a living constructive interest in every public question, which affects the fundamental excuse for our national existence—"that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth." It commands an expression of appreciation and gratitude for the sacrifice of the past and it equally commands a "right about face" to the rebuilding of the wall. It summons every citizen to service with trowel and sword in a continuing work of reconstruction and creation anew. It dictates a lively interest in every town meeting or ward meeting, county, state or national, convention—and better still a lively interest in the preceding political work which has to do with the personnel of the people's representatives at these and other public meetings lest organized selfishness lower the high standards of our institutions to the lower levels of materialism and on down into the slough of graft. Under Lincoln's immortal text the old soldier for himself and the old soldier's family for him and for what he fought for needs to interest himself in the selection of the highest possible character and efficiency in every public servant from the lowest to the highest and then having applied his interest in the selection of public servants that interest should continue throughout their service that they may serve the people. Reciprocity, the Panama Canal, the Pan-American Building, Tariff revision, the danger to government from the public saloon, Woman Suffrage, industrial freedom, equitable laws made, interpreted and administered by those who love their country and recognize its laws as a concrete expression of the sovereign will of a free people—these must all challenge the active supporting interest of every generation if "government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

WE WISH YOU A SAFE JOURNEY HOME.

Today closes this great Fiftieth Anniversary Encampment. You will be busy with your business sessions, with the lingering hand shakes of old friends and the making of trains. Confusion will characterize your parting hours. Comrades will rightfully command your time so we shall be unable to see you much today—we citizens—so we thought we'd just drop you this note to tell you we have enjoyed your stay with us; that we are grateful that so many were spared to come; that you gave us a widened horizon and a larger view of service and loyalty; and to assure you that it will be a little lonesome here tomorrow without you.

We hope your happy camp fires may multiply as you "travel towards the west" and we wish you a safe journey to your Michigan and to your millennial home.

SCOUTS ARE TO BE HIGHLY COMMENDED

Eighteen cases of exhaustion from the heat or troubles more serious before ten this morning have fully demonstrated the practical gifts of the Boy Scouts in giving first aid, and their admiring and grateful praises are heard on all sides. That there has not been a single fatality during the encampment may easily be largely due to the skilled service they have been so prompt in rendering.

S. F. Hartshorn of Dundee was found this morning near the Masonic Temple in a state of collapse from heat prostration and some of his comrades thought him quite beyond help. The Scouts were immediately summoned, arrived with their car and appliances, and soon after at the emergency tent he was receiving their trained and solicitous care. The Scouts became interested in their patient. He had been a drummer boy in the war, and the drum on which he had drummed all the morning until exhausted, was the same on which he had drummed at Shiloh and other battles of the war. He is over 80 and on the drum are lines reading, "12th Iowa, Co. C, Shiloh, 1861." One of the drum-heads and these sticks are the very same ones he used 50 years ago, but he naively stated that the other drum-head he traded with a rebel for a pair of good drum-sticks.

One man was found near the Methodist church last night gasping for breath and his case promised serious consequences, which did not ever come to pass, thanks to the timely help he received at the Scouts' emergency hospital.

Hiram Boutell was picked up in the street completely exhausted. The Scouts with their auto was quickly on hand and after applications of ice and a liberal use of fans and two or three hours of rest, Mr. Boutell was as good as new.

A man in the parade whose home is in Flint dropped on the street during the parade. He was one of the drum corp. The Scouts dropped out of the parade, conveyed him to their emergency hospital, left him in competent hands there, and then circled back and took their place in the parade again.

The Scouts are summoned in many kinds of difficulties. The sentiment abroad seems to be, "Trouble? Call a Scout."

One old soldier, secure in the knowledge that his host lived five blocks from the center of town, went five blocks east instead of west. When he was discovered in a lost and somewhat confused condition, his discoverer said, "Call the Scouts." It was done, and the car on arriving, the old man was carried to the house of his host.

A colored man named D. Bolt of Detroit was overcome by heat and resuscitated by the Scouts.

One old soldier found he had come downtown with only a little silk cap on his head. There was one sure way out of his dilemma, and that way he took. He called a Boy Scout to go home after his proper hat. He wanted to pay them for the service, but to accept it was not in accordance with the tenets of Scouts.

The Physicians who were in attendance at the Boy Scouts camp on Thursday were as follows:

Dr. Hull, 8 a. m. to 10 a. m.; Dr. Clifford, 10 a. m. to 11 a. m.; Dr. Westfall, 11 a. m. to 12 m.; Dr. Clark, 12 m. to 1 p. m.; Dr. Post, 1 p. m. to 2 p. m.; Dr. Paton, 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.; Dr. Barton, 3 p. m. to 4 p. m.; Dr. Murray, 4 p. m. to 5 p. m.; Dr. Dickinson, 5 p. m. to 6 p. m.

TRIBUTE TO THE FLAG.

I have seen the glories of art and architecture and of river and mountain. I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau and the moon rise over Mount Blanc. But the fairest vision on which these eyes ever rested was the flag of my country in a foreign port. Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and the glory and the honor of fifty millions of Americans.—Senator George F. The Kentuckian addressed a mass meeting of negroes held in furtherance of a movement to secure commutation of the woman's sentence. Mr. Powers referred to his own case in Kentucky.

"I know what this suspense to Mattie Lomax means," he said, "for I have been in a similar state when they were trying to commit judicial murder on me in Kentucky."

In the street far below the viaduct an automobile was speeding by and only for the support of the wire she would either have been dashed to death on the pavement or crushed beneath the machine. She clung to the wire for several minutes until help arrived.

LORD ROBERTS, KING'S SWORD BEARER AT CORONATION.

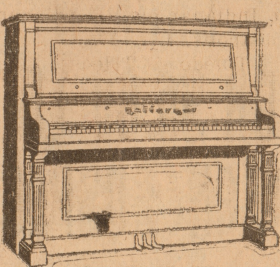

PERHAPS the most benedicted soldier on earth is Frederick S. L. Roberts, first earl of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford, who is to be one of King George's sword bearers at the coronation. Lord Roberts began fighting for Great Britain sixty years ago. The war history of the empire for threescore years is a part of his life story. He served forty-one years in India and wrote a book about it. He received thanks from the government of India several times. Twice both houses of the British parliament have thanked him for distinguished services, and if he should attempt to wear at one time all the hero medals conferred upon him it would be necessary for him to expand his chest considerably. Lord Roberts is a small man. They call him "Little Bobs." India, Afghanistan, Abyssinia and South Africa have seen him in active service. He commanded the forces which conquered the Boers, and in 1901 he was created an earl. The venerable fighter, now in his seventy-eighth year, is a native of Cawnpur, India.

BRIGHAM YOUNG AND BEET SUGAR

Early Head of Mormon Church Experimented in the 'Fifties.

WHERE SUGAR TRUST CAME IN

Thomas R. Cutler, in Charge of Industry for Latter Day Saints, Attracted Favorable Attention of Mr. Havemeyer.

Washington, June 23.—The story of how Brigham Young founded the beet sugar industry in Utah back in the fifties was told in part to the Hardwick committee on inquiry by Thomas R. Cutler, of Salt Lake, one of the pillars of the Mormon church.

Mr. Cutler formerly administered to the spiritual wants of Mormons as a bishop of the church of Latter Day Saints. Some years ago, he took charge of the material interests of the church as represented in certain beet sugar factories, now controlled jointly by the church and the so-called sugar trust.

Mr. Cutler is a little man, sharp of feature, alert and active. He is the man through whom H. O. Havemeyer, the late sugar trust head, merged the interests of the American Sugar Refining company with those of the Mormon church so far as the beet sugar industry in Utah is concerned. Distinguished for a long time among the elders of the Mormon church, Mr. Cutler has been equally successful in the world of business. He was so successful indeed that his operations attracted the attention of the late Mr. Havemeyer. Mr. Cutler testified that the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, of which he is vice president, is capitalized at approximately $9,500,000. Of this stock the American Sugar Refining company owns 465,050 shares, valued at $650,000. Joseph F. Smith, president of the Mormon church, acting as trustee for the church, controls 49,815 shares worth $95,130. The Havemeyer estate owns 23,174 shares of Utah-Idaho Sugar, valued at $31,340. The remainder of the stock is held by 1,433 other shareholders, among them Mr. Cutler, who owns 2,000 shares, worth $20,000.

The witness said that Brigham Young made experiments with sugar beets in the fifties. Lacking the proper knowledge, the experiments were a failure. Later other churchmen took an interest in the industry and finally developing the Utah Sugar company. It was in 1902 that Mr. Havemeyer began to take notice of the beet sugar industry. He sent an agent to Salt Lake to confer with Mr. Cutler and others. This resulted in Mr. Cutler going to New York. Following this trip Mr. Havemeyer, or the American Sugar company, as the Mormons supposed, acquired a block of stock in the Utah concern. Later the church and Havemeyer obtained shares in the Idaho company, the Utah and Idaho companies later being merged.

THE LORIMER INQUIRY

Former United States Senator Hopkins on Witness Stand.

Washington, June 23.—The Lorimer investigating committee resumed its sitting with Albert J. Hopkins, former senator from Illinois, on the stand. He was followed by Richard Yates, former governor of Illinois.

Mr. Hopkins repeated what he told the Helm committee—that John M. Peffers, who aided his candidacy, told him State Senator McCormick had stated he had been offered $2,500, provided he would vote for Lorimer. Mr. Peffers swore he had reported this statement to Mr. Hopkins. Mr. McCormick will probably be subpoenaed as a witness.

Blind Tiger Operator Gives Up After Three Weeks' Chase.

South Bend, Ind., June 23.—John Lane, fugitive from justice for three weeks, gave himself up to the police and paid a fine of $50 and costs for operating a blind tiger on his farm in this county.

Lane dodged local constables night after night and once escaped through an upstairs window in his home. Nearly a month ago Lane's neighbors made a complaint he was selling liquor to 300 negro employees of Zeim's hemp farm, which is located near the Lane place.

Wife Sees Painter's Fatal Fall.

Kokomo, Ind., June 23.—While painting a building, Alva Myers, a painter, thirty-four years old, pitched forward to his death when the ladder toppled. He fell thirty feet, turning a somersault when his body hit an electric sign, and struck on his back upon the sidewalk. The accident was witnessed by Myers' wife and daughter, who were out shopping and turned the street corner as he fell.

Kills Afflicted Twin, Freed.

Victoria, B. C., June 23.—Japanese newspapers give much space to a unique crime and trial at Tokyo, that of a twin accused of voluntary fratricide. One of the brothers had cancer and pleaded with the other to kill him, which he did. The trial judge freed the accused on suspended sentence.

VETERAN GOES AFTER DINNER GETS A WIFE

Nowhere on the program of the great G. A. R. encampment does one find the notice of a wedding; yet if the encampment had not come to Ypsilanti, and if the U and I Helping Hand society had not served such good meals at their stand in the old Daisy market, and if the fortune-teller had not told Mrs. Samantha Hill that at the encampment she would meet her fate and if—but why elaborate? The facts are these: Wednesday of this week Loren Chapman, a G. A. R. veteran in patrotic blue, stepped into the Daisy market to buy his dinner. Mrs. Samantha Hill, a lady who has long lived in Ypsilanti and is much respected, was there at this time. They met, they fell in love; he proposed, she accepted. The next day they made a trip to Ann Arbor and the article they went to get was a marriage license.

Not longer than one o'clock today would the bridegroom wait. Arrangements were expeditiously made, and so logical an outcome of the G. A. R. encampment did this seem that the bridal couple consented to be married on the grand-stand erected at the southeast corner of Congress and Adams streets. Their guests were self-invited and numbered several hundred. A military band escorted them up the street and played before the ceremony. John Miller, the photographer, took a picture of the smiling pair. Then they retreated and the mayor, Tracy L. Townner, made an appropriate speech. He said:

"The encampment has done a great deal for our town and special good, you see, for our old comrade, who is, like many of the other veterans, spunky and cocky as ever. He met Mrs. Hill, a respected lady of our city, in the eating house down the street. A match has been arranged and Justice Stadtmiller will now perform the ceremony."

The bride carried lilies and the witnesses were Thomas Ryan and Mrs. William Tuttle.

Justice Stadtmiller proceeded in his most adroit and happy manner, and now when Mr. Chapman returns to Eaton Rapids, where he owns a comfortable home and a nice little shoe repairing shop, he will take with him the Bride of the Encampment.

W.R.C. CONVENTIONS WELL ATTENDED--MRS. PIERSON PRESIDENT

Not in a long stretch of years has there been so large an attendance upon the W. R. C. conventions as is in progress now in this city. There are 462 here, of whom 310 are voting members. The National President, Mrs. Harris, has been presented with a beautiful cut glass dish as a mark of appreciation. This morning Mrs. Samuel J. Lawrence, wife of the Department Commander of the G. A. R., presented the Commander of the W. R. C. with a paper knife in the form of a replica of Bunker Hill monument.

Mrs. Electa Willard of Detroit was one of the prized visitors at the meeting. She was an army nurse and is now 83 years of age. She complimented the W. R. C. very highly.

Mrs. Willard has a number of badges presented her for her noble services, among them is one presented in 1904 at Washington, D. C., by the National Nurses association which was recently established in this country. Mrs. Willard is a bright and intensely interesting old lady who can probably tell almost as many interesting war experiences as the old soldiers.

Late yesterday afternoon John T. Gilman, Commander-in-Chief, came before the meeting. To his intense delight he was introduced by the affectionate name of "Johnny." He recited a poem he had himself composed called "My Comrade and I."

The W. R. C. have elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. Jennie Pierson, Ann Arbor; Senior Vice-President, Mrs. Bunlee Garty, Ypsilanti; Junior Vice-President, Mrs. Cora B. Perham, Ionia; Treasurer, Mrs. L. G. Sutherland, Ann Arbor; Chaplain, Mrs. Emma Cole, Jackson; First member of the board, Mrs. Clara Wellington, Saginaw; Second member of the board, Mrs. May Holly, Detroit; Third member of the board, Mrs. Carrie E. Torrey, Grosse Ile; Fourth member of the board, Mrs. Lida Hilton, Dundee; Fifth member of the board, Mrs. Eva Wheeler, Boone; Delegate to the national encampment at Boston in August, Mrs. Louise Elliot, of Stanton.

There will be a banquet given by the Personal Workers of the Second Baptist church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Harding, corner of Monroe and Hamilton Sts., Tuesday, June 27, from 3 p. m. until 10 p. m. Plates, 15c. 623-624

Beacon Fires Signal Rejoicing over Double Coronation.

Son of Asquith Gives Word that Starts Chain of Lights All Over British Isles.

London, June 23.—The signal was given from the Crystal palace at 10 o'clock to light up the bonfires in Great Britain from Lands' End to John O'Groats. Prime Minister Asquith's nine-year-old son Anthony acted as the official. He started the fires by telephoning from Downing street to the palace, whereupon an enormous magnesium star was sent up. The massed bands of the guards' regiments played "God Save the King" and an enormous assemblage of people joined in singing the anthem. Immediately the star arose watchers on beacons in the neighboring heights fired fuel piles, and soon the flares thereof were seen on other heights.

They were ignited and so on until more than 2,000 fires blazed from Britain's hilltops. Some piles had wide-based pyramids with timber covered with creosote rising forty feet high. They were indicative of the kingdom-wide enthusiasm over the crowning of the king. Every village, town and city has been celebrating in some form.

Ann Arbor made a fine showing.

What was called "the living flag" was one of the cleverest parts of the procession. Sections of the flag were lifted high by lines of young people in white, and stood bravely straight and high and proud.

"Reciprocity" was a white-clad figure carrying the U. S. flag just above the Canadian flag, but on the same staff.

The Scotch Highlanders, playing bag pipes and hailing from Detroit and Windsor, were effective.

The line of automobiles carrying the veterans not quite able to go afoot was headed by one which contained Governor Osborn, accompanied by President Jones and William B. Hatch.

The floats which appeared last were exceedingly interesting and well appointed. One showed a French trading post, with Indians much in evidence. The next exhibited the deliberations attendant upon the naming of Ypsilanti. Another float showed an old-fashioned school, with a teacher endeavoring to direct the spasmotic activities of a wagon-load of little scholars. "The blue and the gray" showed girls in white with the blue of the north and the gray of the south intermingled in all possible ways. The float representing the present emphatically was that called "Domestic Science." On this the teacher daintily mixed an appetizing compound, and to other girls in the float busied themselves in ways similarly domestic, while on the screen at the front end of the float hung the basketry and other kinds of hand work done by pupils in this department.

Bands appeared at frequent intervals throughout the parade. There were the Ann Arbor, the Milan, the Augusta and the 26th Infantry band of Fort Wayne.

At Gettesburg With Custer

(Written by a Member of Custer's Brigade)

The following graphic account of the terrible day at Gettesburg was written during the war by a member of Custer's brigade.

The regiment was in the very best possible condition for effective work. Promotions of late had been frequent and rapid. At least three captains and nearly all the lieutenants had come from the ranks, the best men still remaining there, waiting their turn for the coveted prize so dear to all soldiers. We had been laying off about two months at Fairfax court-house, doing comparatively nothing but attending strictly to the drill, more particularly the sabre exercise and the trooper mounted. When the army of the Potomac in pursuit of Lee had reached that point and pitched their tents all around us, our regiment was allowed to follow their trail in the direction of Fredericksburg to see if indeed some portions of the Confederate army was not following on that route to Washington.

At daylight on the 18th of June we left camp, reached as far as Dumfries and back to Fairfax again, having marched about eighty miles in twenty hours—a rain beginning—and following it up in Moseby hunting, picketing, scouting and marching incessantly until we reached the vicinity of the battlefield on the 2d of July and went into bivouac at 11 p. m. at Two Taverns, about five miles southeast of Gettesburg.

Wearily and hungry, we passed into dreamland with the consolation, as Gen. Custer told us, as we had no forage nor rations: "These is no forage nor rations to be had; you have as much as any."

To the Front on July 3.

Early in the morning of that eventful 3d of July, our brigade marched to the front, to a point about three and a half miles southeast of Gettesburg, our regiment placed, as Gen. Custer in his report says, "to observe the enemy," behind a ridge completely shut out from observing anything, while the rest of the brigade moved over the ridge and did marvelous fighting all day. We were doomed to absolute quiet for many long hours. To our left and front about forty rods, on the ridge, was battery M of our brigade and most of the guns belonging to Gen. Gregg's division, to which our brigade had been assigned for duty that day. During the fore part of the day we changed direction several times to best support our troops as the enemy threatened attacks from different points, but kept solemnly to our hiding place behind the hill.

Wearily hours had passed, our reveries undisturbed, when suddenly the earnest, solemn, sepulchral tones of Col. Towne, as he appeared on the ridge thirty rods directly in front commanded:

"Attention! Column forward, march!"

The column of squadrons moved instantly, but in a great confusion.

"Draw, sabre!"

Then began a scene, a perfect babel. The regiment had been standing mounted over eight hours, and it was reasonable to expect that it was in condition to move at the command. But standing so long the horses got tired and restless and the men tired, restless and careless. The horses had stepped forward and backward and in all kinds of shapes, and when suddenly called to move so many were out of place—some detailed to carry water, some excused for a few minutes—the ranks closed up leaving the absent no place and they returning crowded in as best they could, making more confusion.

Troubles Augmented.

To add to our troubles, immediately at the head of the column in front of the first squadron was a road running at right angles, the fences both sides having been torn down and the rails put in large piles. These rail piles, the gutters, the grade, some shade trees, and stone piles, were serious obstacles to pass during the terrible confusion. Among it all the colonel came swooping down like a hurricane, all trembling and nervous.

Waiting for this mass of confusion to emerge from the obstructions, when he commanded, "Trot!"

At that instant a man of my company, I think it was Henry Burr, of Plymouth, screamed at the top of his voice: "Matthews, why in h—l don't we count off?" Although Capt. Duggan, by my side, was commanding the squadron, I ordered "halt" (little thinking that the whole regiment was as confused as our squadron), "left dress; count fours!" It was all done in a minute and I had the satisfaction of hearing all the squadron commanders giving the same orders. The colonel repeated "Trot, gallop!" and, as the head of column was nearing the top of the hill, "Charge!"

The Enemy at Hand.

As we ascended the hill on one side the head of a column of four regiments of Confederate cavalry came up the other, and if they had kept straight ahead we would have met them square on top of the ridge. But undoubtedly believing they had a "clear road" the head of their column had borne to their right while coming up the slope, while our column kept straight forward and in exact line of their column, barring the portion deflected. Before sighting us the enemy had given up their organization, and with every assurance, pushing individually, the bravest and best ahead, made with all possible speed for their guns.

Gen. Hampton says, "charged up to the federal guns." Col. Rawle says charged up to within fifty yards of Custer's guns. I think they got within twenty rods of Custer's guns. Now, how did the head of that Confederate column get within twenty rods of our guns? Let Col Rowe tell:

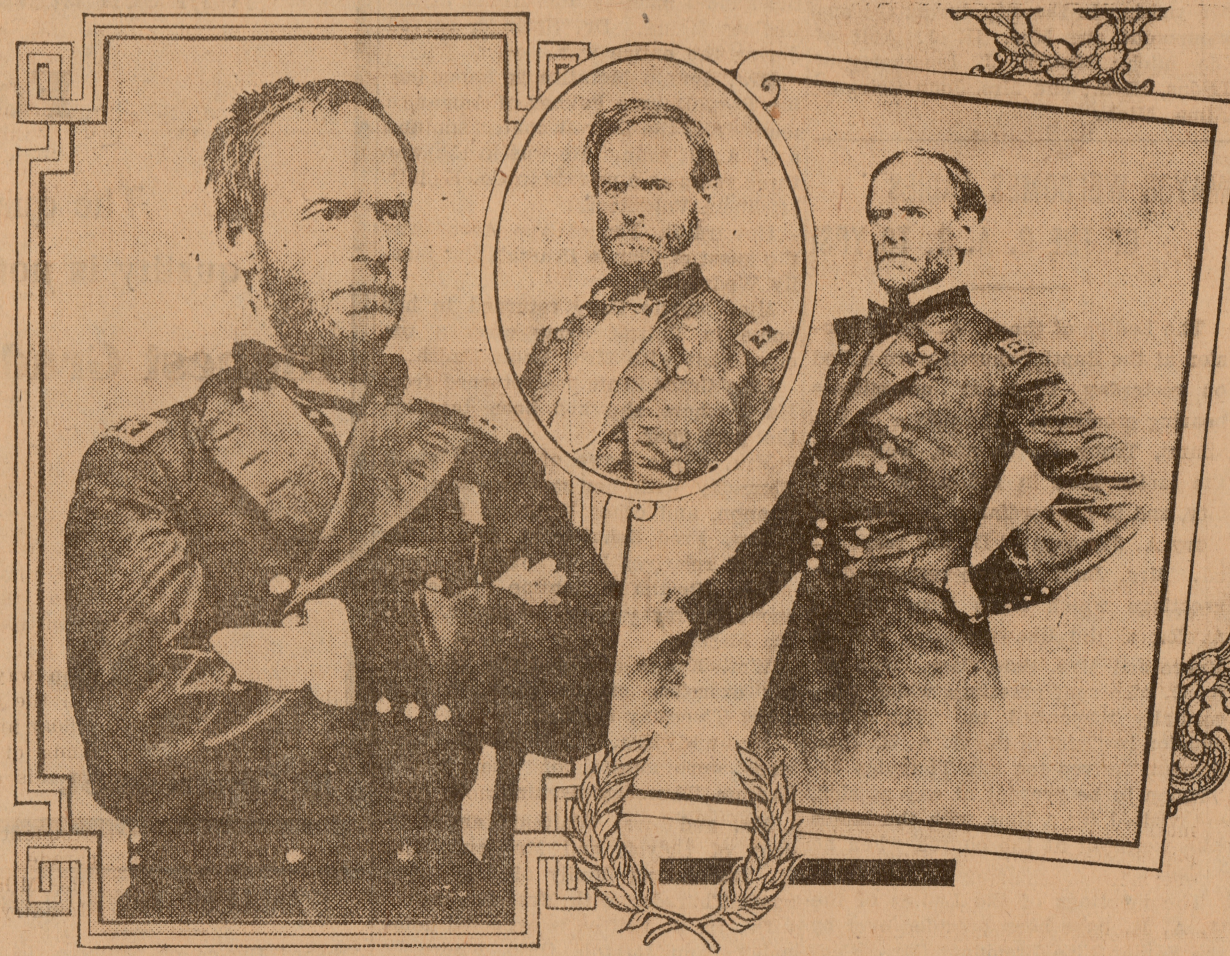

"Just then there appeared in the distance emerging from behind the screen of woods on the crossroads by the Stallsmith farm the brigades of Hampton and Fitz-Rugh Lee. Every one saw at once that unless this, the grandest attack of all, was checked, the fate of the day would be decided against the army of the Potomac. They were Stuart's last reserve, and his last resources. If the Baltimore pile was to be reached and havoc created in our rear the important moment had arrived as Pickett was even then moving up to the assault of Cemetery Ridge. In close columns of squadrons advancing as in review, with sabres drawn and glistening like silver in the bright sunlight, the spectacle called forth a murmur of admiration. It was indeed a memorable one. Chester, whose guns were nearest, opened fire at once, with a range of three-fourths of a mile. Pennington and Kinney soon did the same. Canister and shell were poured into the steadily approaching columns as fast as the guns could fire. The dismounted men fell back to the right and left and such as could got to their horses. The mounted skirmishers fell into line. Then Gregg rode over to the first Michigan  and gave the word to charge. The two columns drew nearer and nearer, the Confederates outnumbering their opponents three or four to one.  Chester put charge after charge of double canister into their midst, his men bringing it up to the guns by the armful. The execution was fearful, but the long rents closed up at once. Though order to retire his guns, towards which the head of the assaulting column was directed, Chester kept on firing until the enemy was within fifty yards, and the head of the first Michigan had come into the line of his fire."

A Desperate Encounter.

Suddenly, as if coming out of the ground, appeared before them this new obstacle the first Michigan in column of squadrons, at full gallop, the front rank at their point, presenting one unbroken front of sabre points, ready to pierce any object coming within reach, the rear rank at front cut standing sentinel over its file leader ready to slash down any miscreant daring to approach. This was the most critical moment of the day for the first Michigan and probably for the enemy. The head of their column half way between the head of our column and the battery wavered between them, considering which to overcome first. The first squadron was commanded by Capt. Duggan in advance of about the fourth file from the left; Lieut. Matthews the first platoon; First Sergt. W. H. Waterman the second platoon; First Sergt. Hattin, company E, the third platoon; Capt. Maxwell second captain. The other squadrons were commanded as follows: Capt. Alexander, Capt. Hascall, Capt. Hazlett and Capt. Brevoort. Only eleven companies were with the regiment which were formed into five squadrons giving to Capt. Brevoort four platoons while the other squadrons had three.

The Rebs Mean Business.

They came on like demons, swinging their sabres, firing pistols, whooping, yelling, shouting, almost touching our horses and firing in our faces, to all of which we paid no attention, but kept on our course, keeping our gait and our sabres in position, the enemy keeping out of our way but frequently coming so close that those in front could, if they choose, reach their horses with their sabres with little effort. Onewhoop, a dash ahead and a flourish with the sabres would have precipitated that squadron and probably the whole regiment on that mass of fleeing Confederates, but they were not whipped yet. Way to our front, coming across the fields, were still advancing to their assistance regiment after regiment of compara-

THREE STRIKING WARTIME PHOTOGRAPHS OF GENERAL SHERMAN.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, oldest of the great triumvirate of Union generals in the civil war, outlived both Grant and Sheridan by several years. He died twenty years ago and lies buried in St. Louis, the city from which he re-entered the regular army in May, 1891, as colonel of the Thirteenth Infantry. General Sherman's march to the sea, immortalized not only by its results in furthering the Union cause, but by the famous song "Marching Through Georgia," is known to nearly everybody, but the life of this great war dog prior to the beginning of the war is not so well known. Sherman was first a West Pointer, then a soldier in the regular army and successively a banker in San Francisco, a business man in New York city, a lawyer in Kansas, superintendent of a military academy in Louisiana and finally president of a horse car line in St. Louis.

Sherman's military operations covered almost the entire area of the gigantic struggle between the states. His first active service was at the first battle of Bull Run, where he commanded a brigade, having been promoted to a brigadier generalship. Shortly thereafter he was ordered to Kentucky, succeeding General Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, in command. After a brief service at St. Louis he was assigned to the Army of the Tennessee. Three horses were shot under him in the battle of Shiloh, where he was severely wounded. General Grant said of him officially, "To his individual efforts I am indebted for the success of that battle." In the operations at Corinth, Vicksburg, Chattanooga and Knoxville he rendered efficient service.

Grant when he became commander in chief of all the armies put Sherman in command of the military division of the Mississippi, instructing him to undertake the capture of Atlanta. Sherman engaged General Joseph E. Johnston's army at Dalton, Resaca, Cassville, Dallas and Kennesaw Mountain, finally capturing Atlanta after a siege of forty days. A few weeks later he began his memorable march to the sea, devastating the country along a path sixty miles wide at some points. Reaching the coast at Savannah, he turned northward through South Carolina into North Carolina, finally compelling the surrender of General Johnston's army.

tively fresh troops in perfect order and confidence, which if allowed to get into position anywhere would have in turn swept us off the field. But the retreating masses, doubling on their own column, wheeled in turn as the squadrons approached, not by command or in order, but individually, and joined the stampede, the retreating foe being kept in column as perfectly as if passing through a lane, by the efforts of the guns which poured into them at every available point, and the scattered remnants of regiments and squadrons of the various commands that had so ruthlessly been tossed about by the advance of the Confederates, were now gathered all along the route, and were shooting, sabre and harrowing their column by all possible means.

A Furious Retreat.

We regulated our gait by our own ability to advance. The fleet horses and fiery riders must be checked to keep pace with slow horses and timid riders, who cannot be hurried; so in the charge the gait is regulated by the slowest poke in the line. In crossing the ditches the squadrons lost distance, so in the end there was from fifteen to twenty-five rods between each and at least a quarter of a mile between the first and last squadrons, while between the Confederates and the first squadrons frequently there would be no more than twenty feet, and during the whole distance of the daring ones just kept ahead, appearing like a front rank, all the time gestulating. Those of our more observing boys said that the Johnnies used some very insulting epithets, and some of them unloaded pistols in our faces as they turned in their saddles.

From the start I determined to touch one of these fellows with my sabre when we should reach that point, as certainly we must, where, not being able to cope with them, our squadrons would break to pieces; but it went to pieces differently than I expected. After we had driven them something over three-fourth of a mile, and the pursued and pursuers had passed out of our recognized lines, the fugitives came to a dead stop, having been driven like a flock of sheep into a corner of a field. The fences had been between the lines all day and undisturbed, gaps only having been opened to allow columns to pass, and beyond was still columns in masses that prevented our immediate foe from further progress.

A Good Time to Fly.

This stop was so sudden and the interval passed so quick that it surprised me. With my attention divided between my victim and the squadron behind me I hardly saw the coming change. Turning suddenly to see how things were going on behind I saw that everything was gone on my right. Turning to the left I saw Capt. Duggan tipping from his horse, which was standing stock still as well as my own and all the other horses I could see. My horse's head was against the crupper of a Confederate, and as I glanced about it seems now as if there had been a thousand pairs of eyes staring at me. The men were so completely wedged in that they had to go at it systematically to get out. In the meantime I sought safety in flight. I had a good horse and a good pair of spurs, and think I had just enough presence of mind to use them. I passed Johnnies on all sides. All seemed as lost as I was.

About thirty rods to the right and rear I caught sight of the second squadron advancing over ground we had recently passed. I came to a full stop, faced about and saw something I never saw before nor since—a sabre charge. The ground was smooth and a trifle ascending, the alignment was perfect and the sabres exactly where they would accomplish most. The enemy had time to extricate themselves and were now coming down on Alexander's little line a thousand to a hundred. But back, back, went the frightened mass, shrinking from that solid line of sabre points, and again went through the wedging process, the squadron repeating the action of the former.

Neglecting their Advantage.

Although each squadron in turn advanced in the same style, over the same ground, and met the enemy at about the same point, to be driven and wedged as if by a battering-ram, each time gaining a little more strength and valor, I saw only one man strike the enemy. When that squadron had suddenly halted, the men disappeared like a covey of young partridge when surprised. Looking about me again I found I was surrounded by the omnipresent Johnnies, all spell-bound like myself, but when I moved away they gave a parting salute, one bullet wounding my horse so that I abandoned him a few minutes later.

Down the line forty or fifty rods I saw our regiment forming. I suppose Capt. Maxwell had rallied a few men as a nucleus, and as the men fell back they formed in, this I think, about 250 of the first Michigan stood in battle array with sabres drawn, as defiant as ever, within eighty rods of 3,000 or 4,000 Confederates, now by themselves, trying their utmost to get their commands re-organized. We could hear their orders as they furiously dashed about; meantime all the available guns were pouring in shell so furiously that they could not hold their men. In this situation our regiment moved up nearly half the distance, but had to swing to the right and rear, to avoid our own shell. In a few minutes the enemy moved back, then we made another hitch backwards, and very shortly the enemy withdrew to a piece of woods a quarter of a mile to the rear.

This closed the fighting of that terrible battle of Gettesburg.

MOVEMENT ON FOOT FOR NEW G. A. R. MEMORIAL HALL

Carpenter Post, No. 180, G. A. R., of Ypsilanti, present their compliments to visiting comrades and friends and extend to them every hospitality that Post 180 have within their control or influence.

They rejoice greatly at the movement which took rise yesterday, June 20, largely through the influence of H. H. Hutchins, Hurling Hustler Hutchins, which has in view the raising of funds necessary to build a G. A. R. and W. R. C. Memorial Hall in Ypsilanti. See small bills for particulars.

Won't it be great when the old soldiers shall be no longer obliged to climb three or four flights of stairs to reach their assembly halls? Because a grateful people, when they understand the motive, will build a hall on the ground floor for the G. A. R.'s in every Michigan city and town.

TO VETERANS

If any "hold up" by way of exorbitant prices for meals, lodging or any scale of prices beyond what has been advertised are put up to any veteran of the Civil War or if any service demands tips, please let it be known to the Commander of the Boy Scouts or to any member of the Executive Committee who will take measures to have any such party put out of business forthwith. For no resident Ypsilanti can be guilty of such a crime and strangers' privileges will be at once annulled if they abuse them.

THE FLAG.

Here comes The Flag.
Hail it!
Who dares to drag
Or trail it?
Give it hurrahs,—
Three for the stars
Three for the bars
Uncover your head to it!
The soldiers who treat to it.
Shout at the sight of it.
The justice and right of it.
The unsullied white of it.
The blue and the red of it.
And tyranny's dread of it!
Here comes The Flag!
Here it is!
Valley and crag
Shall near it.
Fathers shall bless it.
Children care it.
All shall maintain it.
No one shall stain it.
Cheers for the sailors that fought on the wave for it,
Cheers for the sailors that ways were brave for it.
Tears for the men that went down to the grave for it.
Here comes The Flag!

We're Ready - Are You?

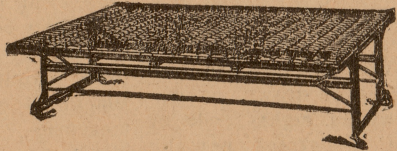

This is the week we advertise Ypsilanti. We must make our guests comfortable, our homes must look their best. The old and worn out furniture and rugs must be replaced with new.

Your porch, first of all, should be attractive. Some people drag all the old furniture out doors that they are ashamed to use within. A hundred fold more visitors will see your porch than ever will look on the inside of your home. A few pieces of OLD HICKORY furniture, a VUDOP porch shade adds greatly to the comfort and appearance of your porch, yet they cost but a few dollars at Mack and Mack's.

About that new spring and mattress. We have a full stock, all sizes, any price. The bed springs cost $2.00, $3.00, $5.00, $8.50, $10.00 and $15.00.

Mattresses at $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $9.00, $10.50, $13.50 and $15.00. Mattresses for cots, $1.75, $2.50, $3.50, $5.00. Sanitary couch pads, $3.50 and $5.00.

Steel sanitary couches, the kind that don't sag, $4.50. A heavier and better one (has eight legs), $6.50.

Pillows that even soldiers can sleep on, $2.00, $3.00 to $5.50.

HOOSIER KITCHEN CABINETS—last chance to save $2.50.

SMALLEST TOWN CLERK

Edward Byrom of Sullivan Is Only Four Feet Six Inches Tall.

Bloomington, Ill., June 23.—Illinois claims the smallest Pythian and town clerk in the west, in the person of Edward Byrom of Sullivan. He is only 4 feet 6 inches in height and is twenty-eight years old. For ten years he has served as page in the Illinois senate chamber in Springfield and is a well-known figure in the state capital, being intimately acquainted with the notables in public life. All entertain a kindly regard for Byrom. His services as page were always reliable and he was faithful to every trust.

He resigned at the last term to become town clerk of Sullivan. He has been a member of the Pythian order for five years and is one of the most enthusiastic knights. What he lacks in size, he makes up in zeal in promoting the welfare of that order.

NEXT FILING TIME FOR CITIZENSHIP IS NEAR AT HAND

Ann Arbor, June 23.—Country Clerk Miller in his work of compiling a general index of all naturalizations declarations and petitions, which was ordered by the Board of Supervisors at their last meeting, has the same completed as far back as 1870. He started with the last and is going backward as there are so many inquiries by parties who wish to look up what they or their fathers have received. The next hearing will be Monday, October 2d. As the names of petitioners must be posted for ninety days, those that wish to get in on this hearing must make out their petitions on or before July third. This makes the time short and parties who were born in Europe or Canada and whose fathers never took out their citizenship papers or only their first one (Declaration) should come in at once and see to their cases. They have no right to vote or hold office of any kind or sit on juries. One supervisor estimated that there were fifty cases of this kind in his township. This might under circumstances in a close election prove very serious, because if shown in court throw out the entire township election. If a township were thrown out, it might effect a county election, and perhaps even a state election. There are also another class of persons who received their first papers or made their declarations since May 8th, 1892, who are not entitled to vote even, their votes if cast being illegal, and they are also disqualified for duties as citizens. A number of these latter have complained that they were not notified of their duties. It seems as if under all these facts, every one would investigate his status and find out where he is at. County Clerk Miller is always ready and will cheerfully look up the old records and indexes. A call may prevent much unpleasantness. The amended law of June 25, 1910, contemplates that any one who has in good faith exercised the functions of a citizen (voted) and discovers that he is not, should at once, not in a year or two, take steps to clear his record. If he does this the necessity of making a Declaration, is obviated. There are now fifteen down so far for the October hearing, among which there are some well known citizens, who thought they were citizens, and who discovered that their fathers only took out their first papers.

ENTHUSIASM RUNS HIGH

never saw the brave lads they sent off again and many of them also served their country in the capacity of nurses.

A quartette of young men sang "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground." Then a poem was read which had been composed by Mr. Russell at the time a few years ago when the battle flags were sealed up in a glass case at Lansing, not to be again opened.

Other speeches followed, and other music. It was a most inspiring occasion and one to be long cherished.
